MY ADVANTAGES:

- Analytical Mindset – I am enjoying working with data, extracting key insights, and creating clear summaries and visualizations.
- Problem-Solving – I am highly solution-oriented and independent. I feel confident in taking on challenges and finding logical ways to address them.
- Technical Versatility – I have experience in IT, project assistance, QA/testing, and am open to new technologies (e.g. Arduino, Excel, data analysis).
- Self-Learning Attitude – I am curious and willing to explore new tools or platforms that align with my interests (e.g. GitHub, Eurostat, Arduino).
- Strong Written Communication – I am clear and structured when documenting work, creating reports, and explaining conclusions (in English, Polish and German).
- Multilingual Skills – I am speaking fluent English and communicative German, which opens up more international opportunities.

MY DISADVANTAGES:

- Limited Interest in People-Facing Roles – I prefer independent, quiet work rather than roles with frequent social interaction or client-facing tasks.
- Still Building Confidence in Coding – I am not currently focused on deep programming (like Python), so technical roles requiring heavy scripting might feel overwhelming.
- German Proficiency (Business Level) – While I can communicate in German, I find business terminology somewhat challenging.
- Clarity of Career Direction – I am still exploring the best niche for myself
